Not just numbers, people. From the moment we first met the staff at Murray, Jonson, White & Associates, we knew something was different about them. They didn't just talk about their expertise working with numbers. Instead, they focused on the expertise their people possessed and how it benefited their clients. When they asked us to design, write, develop, and host their website, we made sure to promote that differentiation through an audience-centric website and messaging that spoke to each group, all while enhancing the site's SEO (search engine optimization) and interactivity with its visitors.
